GENERATIONS OF GIRL SCOUTS STILL SELLING COOKIES

ATLANTA, March 4, 2009 – Fourth generation Girl Scout, Sarah Holcomb, receives a Girl Scout Cookie order from Marilyn Midyette, chief executive officer of Girl Scouts of Greater Atlanta, Inc. as Dunwoody resident Sue Cunnold, Sarah's grandmother, beams proudly.

Sue, who has been a Girl Scout for over 50 years, is the assistant leader for Sarah's Girl Scout troop and the co-chair of the Friends of Our Chalet, USA Committee (a group which supports Our Chalet, one of the four World Centers for the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts (WAGGGS)), chair of the Trefoil Guild (an organization which links together members of Girl Scouts of the USA not affiliated with a troop to help support the Girl Scout/Girl Guide Movement) and the national coordinator for the Olave Baden-Powell Society

(an international society of nearly 1,000 men and women who financially support the Girl Guide/Girl Scout Movement around the world). Sarah is in kindergarten at Vanderlyn Elementary School and a first year Girl Scout Daisy. Sarah's mother, Carolyn Holcomb, is currently serving as the treasurer on Girl Scouts of Greater Atlanta's Board of Directors, is Sarah's Girl Scout troop leader and is a lifetime member of Girl Scouts. In addition, Sarah's aunt, Alison Boivin is a lifetime member and Sarah's great-grandmother supported Sue during her Girl Scout days.

"It means everything to me that my daughters and granddaughter are also Girl Scouts," Sue says of why Girl Scouting is such an important part of her family. "The girls learned about unselfish service to others, they had fun in Girl Scouts and saw the benefits it gives to all girls."

Many of the Girl Scout activities that Sue and her family are able to participate in are made affordable through the proceeds from the Girl Scout Cookie Program sale. If you would like to find Girl Scouts selling cookies near you, visit www.girlscoutsofgreateratlanta.org and click on the cookie finder.
